

Scientists in the Classroom Program

Praxis has a resource database of Scientists that would like to share their expertise with students in the classroom. Scientists are experts in their particular area, and are very willing to come into your classroom to show your students the connection between what they are learning in the class and the “real” world. Students are able to see the real life connection.

When you call to request a “Scientist in the Classroom”, please be sure to have the following information available:

Name:

School:

Phone Number:

E-mail address:

Mailing/Street Address:

Class Time:

Where the Scientist should meet you:

How long you would like the Scientist to present for:

Number of Students in the Classroom:

Date you would like the Scientist to come (please have a couple of alternative dates):

Topic(s) you are covering:

How far through the topic will you be (1/2 done, finished):

Would you consider a fieldtrip with this topic?

Note: As a teacher, you are required to remain in the classroom the entire time the Scientist is there. At no time should the Scientist be left alone with the students.
